HAWAII, of all the states, is the most isolated. It is the world in microcosm. All the races, all the religions, all the ideas, aspirations, and philosophies of the world coexist, but blend here into a new separateness; and even the most modern is imposed by contemporary life. The fact that these magic islands have a tentative beginning of the greatest ideals: a unified world.

While this is an important part of the setting in which it is the vacationers to the 50th state. The scenery of tangled jungle, sunny beaches; opportunity for living or the "little grass" exotic food and drink—a universal tropical isle are the southeast are Molokai, Lanai, Kahoolawe and Maui. Maui, second largest in the chain, is the site of Haleakala (House of the Sun), an immense dormant volcano, and the old, once-lusty whaling port of Lahaina. Molokai has pineapple fields, ranches and a budding tourist economy. Though Lanai is owned by the Dole Corp., visitors are welcome to visit Lanai City, view the acres of pineapple fields and roam the slopes and beaches. Kahoolawe, once used as a penal colony by Hawaiian monarchs, is a military gunnery range.

Hawaii, the easternmost island of the chain and the southernmost point in the United States, is nearly twice as large as the other seven islands combined. It is appropriately called the "Big Island" or the "Orchid Island" to distinguish it from the state. Here is the state's highest mountain, Mauna Kea. Here too, within Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, are Mauna Loa and Kilauea, both very live volcanoes in one of the world's most spectacularly active volcanic areas.

Television sports programs have brought the colossal surf of Oahu into nearly every livingroom in the country, but surfing—championship or otherwise—is only one facet of Hawaii's outdoor recreation scene. Every island has good public swimming beaches; colorful offshore reefs beckon scuba divers and snorkelers. Catamarans and outriggers add an island flavor to sailing. Sport fishing ranks with some of the world's best—record marlin are frequently caught off the Big Island's Kona coast.

Hunters hold Hawaii in high esteem, especially the Big Island, which offers the widest variety of game. Wild boar, feral goat, Mouflon sheep and wild Vancouver bull are much-sought quarry. Fresh-water fishing is also good, with streams, impoundments and spring-fed ponds yielding the native o'opu bass, trout, bluegill and other varieties. Golfing is extremely popular throughout the year, as is evidenced by the number of beautiful, challenging courses.

Mix Singapore, Manila, Tokyo, Peking, Las Vegas and Boston, put the combination in a natural setting straight out of a Gauguin painting—add the scent of gingerflowers and the rush of freeway traffic, and you have Honolulu, capital of Hawaii and Oahu's largest city. It is a fascinating mixture of east and west, the

and the laid back, the old and the futuristic.
It is this very diversity that so far has prevented
the hectic pace of the 20th century from overpowering the smiling tropical charm that has captivated visitors since George Vancouver.

The harbor—the heart of the old downtown—
the shipping and trade areas and the oriental district resting, the best known section of the city is Honolulu. It is the core of the state's tourist industry, a link of highrise hotels providing all the comfort and while offshore reefs protect swimmers
from strong currents and unwelcome marine dwellers.
Among many of the plush shops, fine restaurants and night spots that have given Honolulu the reputation of being second only to Las Vegas as a show town.
Beyond the harbor, the U.S.S. Arizona National Monument remembers less sunny days.

Honolulu is not the only city, however. Hilo, on the Big Island, Lahaina on Maui and many other communities offer much to see and do—all with Hawaii's Aloha (take-it-easy) spirit.
